TGF- $\beta$ -induced EMT is blocked in FaDu cells by enhanced Smad ubiquitination regulatory factor expression. Development of malignant tumors is induced by an accumulation of mutations in specific oncogenes and tumor suppressor genes. MicroRNAs (miRNAs) have been suggested to play a role in tumor progression and metastasis through their effects on gene regulation. In this study, we aimed to reveal the expression profiles of various miRNAs in TGF- $\beta$ -induced epithelial-mesenchymal transition (EMT) and to identify the potential role of microRNA-181b (miR-181b). We used RNA microarray analysis to examine changes in the miRNA expression profiles in TGF- $\beta$ -induced FaDu cells. Differentially expressed miRNAs were validated by real-time PCR analysis. EMT associated markers were checked using Western blot analysis. We found that miR-181b was consistently downregulated in TGF- $\beta$ -
